The princes were removed from the immediate scene of operations, and consigned to the rear of the army, to divest hostilities of the character of a war of Restoration. The cam The Count de Provence assumes the title of Regent. paign was tame, undecisive, mingled with incomplete successes, immense reverses, and shameful retreats. The princes of Conde and their army alone took any active part in it. The Count de Provence and the Count d Artois continued to foment the war in the courts; but they scarcely ever showed themselves in the field. Dumouriez stopped them in the defiles of Argonne; and the Duke of Brunswick, commander-in-chief of the combined Prussian armies, fell back before our battalions. A unanimous cry of indignation and of treason rose from the army of the emigrants, and from the council of the French princes on this retreat; for it cut them off from Paris, France, and the Restoration. This was the first retrograde step of Europe before the revolutionary genius of France. Dumouriez, victorious at Verdun by tactics, conquered at Jemraapes by valour; and the Count de Provence, flying before the Belgian insurrection, repassed the Rhine, and took shelter at Dusseldorf. He and his brother had negociated a loan of some millions in Holland, which kept in pay their household, their guard, and their court; and thence, with heavy heart and moistened eye, they looked on at a distance, while the funereal drama was accomplishing...
